Dear _____

I am writing to let you know that home-educated children are very often known to many adults and children in their community, outside their own families.

Graham Badman, in his Review of Elective Home Education in England, stated that "attendance at school brings other eyes to bear," and claimed that this means children are safer at school than if they are home educated.

I was given this card by a member of a home educating family I see regularly and I can assure you that being home educated does not mean that their children are hidden from view.

Please take the time to meet and talk with home educating families in your constituency to find out more about home education, before you vote on the recommendations of Graham Badman's review.

Yours sincerely,

Signed
